

18 November 2016

Dear all,

The online scheduling for International Masterclasses 2017 has been closed today and preliminary schedules have been created based on your entries. You will find the CERN schedule attached and the Fermilab schedule at <https://quarknet.i2u2.org/page/videoconferences-2017#fnal>. Please check your schedule carefully and let us know if any corrections are needed.

As you will see there are still several slots in the schedule, and we are looking forward to more institutes that will join during the next weeks, given a maximum of 5 institutes in one video conference.

During the next weeks I expect several updates of the schedule. I will not send around all new versions to avoid swamping you with emails. Instead, you can always find the status quo of the schedule on our webpage at www.physicsmasterclasses.org/index.php?cat=schedule.

If you plan to join the programme and have not registered so far please do not hesitate to contact us: Uta for CERN videoconferences and Ken for Fermilab videoconferences.

Kind regards,

Uta and Ken
